Identifying Non-standard Abbreviations *

PNAS uses Scientific Style and Format: The CSE manual for authors, editors, and publishers (7th edition, 2006) as the primary guide for journal style. You must define any nonstandard abbreviations by selecting 'Yes' and using the text box to define any nonstandard abbreviations used. This information will be included in a footnote if your manuscript is accepted for publication.

For approved abbreviations and symbols, see:

Academy members who have told authors they are willing to oversee the review process have 48 hours from the time of submission to alert the PNAS Office to their request. During this period the PNAS Office will contact the member to confirm. Authors should coordinate submission to ensure the member is available. The Board cannot guarantee that the member will be assigned the manuscript or that it will be sent for review. If a member has agreed to serve as Editor for this paper, add the member to your Suggested Editor list by highlighting the name in the left-hand box and clicking the 'Add to list as Prearranged Editor' button.
